What's Happening with the Florida Area North Website

Have you seen the North Florida Area website lately?

More documents have been posted to the site, including some of the Area officer and coordinator role descriptions that members can look over and consider. Contact links have been added to send email to panel members, and even more information of interest is on the Resources page.

We also have the beginnings of an Alateen page - woo hoo! I'd love to see this page become a microsite for our Alateens. For those of you who don't speak "geek/tech", a microsite is a small cluster of pages which are meant to function as a supplement to a primary website. They are typically used to add a specialized group of information, like Alateen info!

We've also added a page for District event information and information on events outside the North Florida Area. While these events are being kept separate from or North Florida Area calendar, the page they are on can be reached by a link on the calendar page

A big "thank you!" to everyone who has sent documents, made suggestions, pointed out inaccuracies, given me another perspective to consider, or just provided an opinion. You have all helped to make this website more representative of the North Florida Area. Now, will someone PLEASE send me something for the Sharings page??

The design of the website is being changed a bit and some of the text may still be a little difficult to read, but I'm working to correct this. Our website, much like me, is still a work in progress.

As always, I am grateful to be of service.

Your Panel 49 Web Diva,

Sharon E.
